OBAMA AND IMMIGRATION REFORM LOURDES MELUZA. WASHINGTON, DC PKG 2:46

President Barack Obama renewed his push for U.S. immigration reform Thursday, reaching out to Hispanic voters despite minimal chances that Congress will pass such legislation this year. In a broad speech that did not break new policy ground, Obama, a Democrat, called for Republican support to pass a law to address the 11 million illegal immigrants in the country without disrupting the economy or violating American values. Obama has been under pressure to keep his promise from the 2008 presidential campaign to overhaul U.S. immigration rules. A tough new law in Arizona has brought the issue to the forefront of public debate, galvanizing Hispanics, who are an important constituency for November's congressional elections.

OBAMA IMMIGRATION LAWSUIT
LOURDES MELUZA-WASHINGTON, DC
PKG 2:30

The Obama administration Tuesday sued Arizona over the state's strict new immigration law in a move that drew fire from Republicans who said the border needed more security. The Arizona law requires state and local police to investigate the immigration status of anyone they reasonably suspect of being an illegal immigrant, provoking criticism that it is unconstitutional and would sap law enforcement resources. The Republican-controlled Arizona legislature passed the law to try to stem the flood of thousands of illegal immigrants who cross its border from Mexico each month and to cut down on drug trafficking and other crimes in the area.

The amendment would require 60 percent approval from the voters.

The federal official leading the Gulf oil spill cleanup says a new containment cap and an additional ship collecting oil could effectively contain the spill as early as Monday. National Incident Commander Thad Allen said Friday that the work to replace a leaky containment cap on the well head with a tighter one will begin Saturday. At the same time, a ship connecting to a different part of leak is expected to come online Sunday.

USA IMMIGRATION AUDITS

VO : 28

The U.S. government is taking a new approach in its effort to crack down on illegal workers by quietly auditing the employment records of thousands of companies suspected of hiring undocumented immigrants rather than staging high-profile worksite raids, the New York Times reported Saturday. The Times said the Obama administration had conducted such audits at more than 2,900 companies so far -- a number it said dwarfed the number of companies affected by the immigration raids at factories and farms during the eight-year administration of Obama's Republican predecessor, George W. Bush.

OIL SPILL LATEST

VO :22

The delicate work of removing and replacing a cap over the gushing oil well on the floor of the Gulf of Mexico is under way. BP officials say undersea robots have taken off the existing cap and oil is now gushing freely into the Gulf. The hope is to fit a tighter dome that will funnel more oil to collection ships on the surface a mile above. The next steps will prepare the seal for the new cap. If all goes well, the oil could be contained sometime Monday. A permanent solution is still weeks off. That involves an attempt to plug the well far below the gushing well head.

OBAMA WEEKLY ADDRESS

VO :24

With the military fighting two wars, President Barack Obama said Saturday the country has a "solemn responsibility" to ensure that veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder get the help they need. Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki is to announce new regulations Monday intended to make it easier for veterans with PTSD to receive government benefits. The new rules will not only apply to veterans of the Iraq and Afghanistan wars, but also those who served in previous conflicts.

OIL SPILL LATEST

VO :19

BP crews are claiming progress as they try to fit a tighter cap on the ruptured well at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico. But in the meantime, the oil is gushing freely from the wellhead and officials are warning that there's no guarantee the delicate operation will succeed. The tighter cap is designed to catch all the crude that's flowing from the well. The cap that had been in place was collecting about 1 million of the estimated 1.5 million to 2.5 million gallons that's been spewing from the well daily.

PKG 2:00

BP Plc prepared Tuesday to test a new cap on its runaway well in an effort to finally arrest the flow of oil gushing into the Gulf of Mexico for the last 12 weeks. The tests, due to last between six and 48 hours, will begin later Tuesday on BP's newly installed "capping stack", which has a better seal than the last cap placed on the well and aims to stop oil from spewing out of the failed blowout preventer. A critical test to gauge the integrity of the blown-out well is expected to start "in a couple of hours," a BP executive said at about 3:30 p.m. EDT .

BP OIL SPILL LATEST

VO: 25

BP Plc will go ahead with a key pressure test on its ruptured Gulf of Mexico well to determine if it can proceed with a plan to temporarily seal the well, a senior U.S. official said Wednesday. Retired Admiral Thad Allen, who is overseeing the U.S. effort to deal with the disaster, said the decision was taken after a day of intense deliberation that reached the level of President Barack Obama and his cabinet.

BP has finally gained control over one of America's biggest environmental catastrophes -- at least for now. The company has placed a carefully fitted cap over the runaway well that has been gushing crude into the Gulf of Mexico since early spring. It's only a temporary fix but it's being greeted with hope and high expectations on the Gulf Coast. But some residents are skeptical. If the cap holds, if the sea floor doesn't crack and if the relief wells being prepared are completed successfully, this could be the beginning of the end for the spill. But that's a lot of ifs, and no one is declaring any sort of victory beyond the moment. Tests are being run on the cap to see if it can hold back the oil.

FINANCIAL REFORM

LOURDES MELUZA. WASHINGTON, DC

PKG 2:12

President Barack Obama says businesses have nothing to fear from the financial overhaul bill, unless they cut corners or bilk customers. Obama is expected to sign the bill as early as Wednesday. The Senate, on a 60-39 vote, approved it today -- almost two years after a financial meltdown sent the economy into a recession.

IMMIGRATION LIST

State investigators are focusing on a handful of state agencies where "The List" could have been generated. A spokeswoman for Governor Gary Herbert said among those agencies is The Department of Workforce

Services. In fact, a considerable amount of evidence points to the database at Workforce Services as the source of the information.

IMMIGRATION POLL

JAIME GARCIA. PHOENIX, ARIZONA

PKG 2:00

Immigration now a top concern among Latinos, poll shows. A nationwide survey of Latinos indicates that the issue now ranks with the economy as the most important. The tough new Arizona law is believed to have triggered the shift. Latinos now view immigration as their leading concern along with the economy in what activists say is a major shift most likely driven by controversy over Arizona's tough law against illegal immigrants. Nearly a third of Latinos also believe that racism and prejudice are the central issue in the immigration debate, over national security, job competition and costs of public services for illegal immigrants, according to a national survey released Wednesday.
